

Expert in Politics and Communications

Roland Tichy

Born in Bad Reichenhall (Germany), Roland Tichy studied economics, politics and communications in Munich and New Orleans. After two years on the planning staff at the German Federal Chancellery, he joined the business news magazine WirtschaftsWoche in 1985 to take up the post of Bonn correspondent. He went on to hold the position of deputy Broadcasting Officer after German reunification. In this capacity he shared responsibility for developing the electronic media landscape in the new federal states. He has worked for prestigious German business magazines and as a media consultant for large corporations. He also headed the Berlin office of...
