

Political scientist, US American correspondent & book author

Paul Hockenos

Paul Hockenos is a US American correspondent and acclaimed book author who knows Germany like few outsiders do. He is an expert on Germany's clean-energy transition, transatlantic relations, and Berlin's vibrant subcultures. For three decades, Paul Hockenos has reported from Europe, for Foreign Policy, CNN Opinion, New York Times, The Nation, and many other periodicals. He has worked as newsroom editor, correspondent, and analyst. In addition to four books on European affairs, Paul has won prize fellowships from American Academy in Berlin, German Marshall Fund of the US, and European Journalism College. He covered the fall of communism in Eastern...
