

Performance under pressure - for people, leaders and organisations in a brittle world.

Beate van Loo-Born

Beate van Loo-Born has spent twenty years studying what makes people and organisations perform, building it inside global companies, and living it at the front of elite sport. She is one of very few people who can speak about performance from all three positions at once: as a Group CFO and COO who has run operations through real pressure, as a researcher in systems theory and performance, and as a seven-time Ironman World Championship qualifier. Her career spans three industries and three continents. She held senior leadership roles at UBS across Zurich, Singapore, and Melbourne, served as COO of the...
